Details

The artwork features a red bridge above a narrow river. A tiny boat passes by, between the two huge structures holding the bridge on each side. Depicting an industrial environment, the artist gave the overall impression of a middle ground between nature and technology.

Paul Weingarten is an American Postwar & Contemporary painter.

Paul Weingarten received a BS in Art at New York University and studied at The Art Students League and Columbia University, where he enrolled in the MA programme. He has taught studio art in Connecticut and New York state school programmes at the New York Studio School, the University of Wisconsin, and Binghamton University (SUNY).
