Details

This abstract expressionist painting by American artist Bert Miripolsky features large, vibrant, expressive brush strokes in red, yellow, blue and black. American artist Miripolsky studied at the Chicago Art Institute in the early 1940s, drawing influence from Kandinsky and Rothko, and has since exhibited around the world. His works, which portray personal experiences expressed through color and form, are largely untitled, intending for the viewer to experience in a more individual way.
