Details

This minimalist drawing features an interesting combination of red, black, and grey lines and blocks. The main grey block on the right part shows a fabric-like area topped by a thick black line facing the rest of the composition. The overall impression is a feeling of solitude embodied by a thick black line surrounded by pale and conformist vertical and horizontal lines. It would fit perfectly for a business office or an industrial interior!

Ron Jaiyowell is an acclaimed artist known for his stunning geometrical minimalism, which draws inspiration from the Bauhaus movement. Even in its sublime simplicity, the minimalist execution is a powerful tale of geometric design in a singular space. His work has been showcased at renowned galleries and museums such as the Museum of Contemporary Art Houston and The Menil Collection. Additionally, his pieces have been featured in publications like Texas Monthly and Art News Magazine, garnering acclaim among private collectors who appreciate its modern aesthetic appeal. Minimalism in geometry is an art form where shapes and colours are used to create simplistic yet meaningful pieces that reflect a complex underlying concept or message within their simple lines and palette.
