Details

This painting features a red sky (as Gastaldi named it) and it is part of 3. The #2 one is featuring a yellow sky and the third one is the desert light.

#1 and 2 show the strength of nature with vigorous large brush strokes and bright colours whereas the colours of #3 depicting the desert light, are more muted and reflect perfectly the desert atmosphere before a storm. See attached the pictures of the 2 matching ones.

Jerome Gastaldi, born in Oakland, California, in 1945, is a contemporary artist.

His works have been compared by art critics to that of Robert Rauschenberg, Edward Kienholz, and Francis Bacon. His creative process is both emotional and intuitive, as evidenced by Gastaldi's rapid handling of paint.

His paintings are powerful that express the immediacy, movement, and timelessness of his subjects, which are predominantly landscapes. The seductive colours and fierce strength of nature seem to lure the spectator into his realm. Gastaldi works in a number of media, including painting, filmmaking, sculpture, printmaking, ceramics, and performance. His work has been exhibited internationally in museums, universities, and other public institutions, as well as held in public, private and corporate collections.
